Autism Clinic/Center for Autism Resources and Education Center Coordinator:
Wendy Trotter

Hours:

8:00 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday through Friday

For your first visit, please call for a 30 minute orientation meeting

The Center for Autism Resources and Education was developed as an inclusive, one-stop, trusted resource for Autism information across the lifespan. The Community Autism plan identified an Autism Resource Center as an important priority. This center was modeled after The Autism Program (TAP) center in Springfield, and was developed as an outreach program for families and professionals working with children with Autism.

The center contains a wide variety of resources including: visual supports, books, Boardmaker, a software program that creates visual cues for tasks, DVDs, games, structured teaching kits, toys, computer software programs, internet access, learning aids and other materials.

The center is available for families, service providers, educators and the general community.

Many of the materials are free, and other materials are available on loan for two weeks. Advice and assistance will be available if families are interested in purchasing these items.

This program is partially funded by:

The Lorraine and George Shadid Autism Resource Center was established as a result of the couple's long-term interest in Autism and to commemorate the Easter Seals Tribute Dinner held in their honor in November 2006. The Tri-County Community Autism plan identified an Autism Resource Center as an important priority. This center was modeled after The Autism Program (TAP) center in Springfield, and was developed as an outreach program for families and professionals working with children with Autism.

The center contains a wide variety of resources including: visual supports, books, Boardmaker, a software program that creates visual cues for tasks, DVDs, games, structured teaching kits, toys, computer software programs, internet access, learning aids and other materials.

The center is available for families, service providers, educators and the general community.

Many of the materials are free, and other materials are available on loan for two weeks. Advice and assistance will be available if families are interested in purchasing these items.

The goal for the center is that it will become an inclusive, one-stop, trusted resource for Autism information and referral services across the lifespan.
